Eight tons of computer electronics and durable medical equipment were collected during an equipment recycling drive held by the District 30's Environmental Awareness Committee on April 28 at Maple School. Residents donated computer electronics ranging from computers, monitors, printers, cell phones, fax machines, keyboards, mice and software, to a variety of printer/power cords and other assorted computer-related technology.

The Assistive Technology Exchange Network, an Infinitec program of United Cerebral Palsy of Greater Chicago, congratulated the committee in a letter "for conducting an outstanding e-waste electronics recycling computer drive."

The donated equipment will be upgraded, refurbished and distrib-

ized for children with disabilities. It allows them to actively participate in the classroom and at home. Thus, the Recycling Drive benefits children with disabilities while helping save our precious environment by having diverted eight tons of electronics needlessly going to landfills. Thank you again for your incredible efforts to ensure that this drive was the enormous success that it was," stated Gregory Grill, director of the network.

The District 30 committee chairman is Maple School Assistant Principal Arnold Kahn. Committee members are School Board President Barbara Goldstein, Assistant Superintendent for Finance and Operations Christopher Young and Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds George Becker. Volunteers included District 30's maintenance mechanic Federico Lopez and Wescott School custodian Licio Castrejon, and teachers Pat Kichinko, Terry Jeneski, Peggy Martin and Tia Stevens.

Student volunteers on April 28 were Maple School students Oliv Boryszewski, Katherine Adamski and Adam Levin. Network members who loaded the equipment on to trucks were Matina Travis, Jesse Berryhill, D bie Jensen and Clint Cochran.
